The successful applicant will be expected to maintain and build on this very high standard.

As a small private run family operation Tasmanian Devil Unzoo originally was established as the world's first Tasmanian devil centre about an hour from Hobart on Tasman Peninsula in Tasmania's South East.

In recent years it has been developed under a ground breaking Unzoo master plan by renowned designer Jon Coe which embraces the surrounding natural world as well as the park inhabitants.

This includes a large native botanic garden, wild Devil Tracker tours, bird tours and nature photography. Interestingly the boundary fence has been removed so the local wild animals can come and go as they wish.

The Unzoo is the major partner in the Peninsula Devil Conservation Project which aims to preserve the last secure natural population of devils on Tasman and Forestier Peninsulas.

The Unzoo's Save the Devil effort includes monitoring wild devils with remote cameras and raising funds for electronic roadside alarms to reduce road kill.
